FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Dear Friend of SEED, January 2018

It’s been a challenging year for Kurdistan. The impact of the financial crisis deepened in 2017, intensifying the challenges for all of us. Military efforts to liberate Mosul, surrounding areas, and Raqqa, Syria from ISIS drove hundreds of thousands of new arrivals into Kurdistan for safe haven. Iraq’s population, especially ethnic and religious minorities, have been most tragically affected by the sectarian violence and insecurity, following the 2014 takeover of one third of the country by ISIS and subsequent genocidal campaign.

Due to the generous support of donors, new foundations, and a substantial US State Department grant, SEED has been able to expand our work dramatically to serve these needs. In 2017, we had tremendous growth in our organization from 25 staff to almost 50, and we’re still growing. We have five centers of operation and are delivering services in over thirty different camps and non-camp locations. Our holistic and long-term approach is quite unique in Kurdistan, with specialized and high quality services, we have influence and impact beyond our size.

We strived this past year to see that families returning from captivity or displaced or affected by conflict get the care they need to recover and rebuild their lives. We delivered comprehensive services to the displaced, survivors of violence, and those at risk, that combines mental health and a broad range of social support services, to protect, empower, and aid recovery. To reach more survivors and ensure no one in need slipped through the cracks, we started mobile services in March, delivering services across Kurdistan.

SEED has expanded work with the local community, finding that the needs of the local population are not that different from the displaced. With decades of trauma, war, persecution, torture, and genocide, the psychological wounds are both deep and right there at the surface. We worked with survivors of gender based violence – women and men – targeted for “honor–based” violence, LGBTI cases, survivors of trafficking, and men and boys as both victims and potential perpetrators of violence.

To address the needs that exist in Kurdistan, both from the current conflict and decades of violence and persecution, we are making significant investments in building local capacity of institutions, organizations, and individuals delivering services. At the beginning of the year, SEED launched the Center for Mental Health and Psychosocial Support Services (MHPSS) at Koya University, the only university in all of Iraq that has an undergraduate clinical psychology program. Through education, training, and supervision, the Center for MHPSS is strengthening the knowledge and skills of those studying Clinical Psychology, as well as those already working in the field of MHPSS.

As we embark in a new year, there is much to do, and we are grateful for your continued support. Many here in Kurdistan are relying on it to have a more healthy, prosperous, and safe 2018.

THE ISSUES

Decades of conflict have inflicted enormous suffering

CONFLICT AND THE TAKEOVER OF LARGE AREAS OF IRAQ BY ISIS CREATED A HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCY.

★ Thousands of civilians were murdered and thousands more enslaved by ISIS’s genocidal campaign.

CLOSE TO ONE MILLION PEOPLE FLED TO KURDISTAN IN SEARCH OF SAFETY AND NOW RESIDE IN CAMPS AND HOST COMMUNITIES ACROSS THE REGION.

★ Many of those who made it to Kurdistan witnessed the murder of family members and have loved ones still in ISIS captivity. Trauma is therefore widespread among displaced men, women, boys, and girls.

ON TOP OF THIS, DECADES OF CONFLICT IN IRAQ HAVE RESULTED IN POPULATION-WIDE TRAUMA.

★ Local capacity to provide assistance is overstretched and expertise in mental health is in short supply.

THE SHAME AND STIGMA THAT EXIST AROUND MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS MAKE IT EVEN HARDER FOR THOSE IN NEED TO SEEK HELP.

★ The situation for women and girls is especially difficult because of the violence and discrimination they commonly face.

IN MANY CASES, SURVIVORS ARE NOT EVEN ALLOWED TO LEAVE THEIR TENTS.

★ This makes them very isolated, making access to mental health and psychosocial support services very difficult.
OUR RESPONSE

We help those displaced by conflict and violence to heal, recover, and begin to rebuild their lives.

SEED PROVIDES COMPREHENSIVE MENTAL HEALTH AND PSYCHOSOCIAL SUPPORT SERVICES

★ We help people heal from trauma, cope with displacement, and start to rebuild their future.
★ Qualified, skilled clinical psychologists deliver therapy and counseling.
★ Case management services are delivered by trained and supervised case managers.
★ A holistic care approach addresses both mental health and social needs.
★ We provide life skills education to equip people with the knowledge they need to help their families live healthier lives.

SEED SUPPORTS AND EMPOWERS SURVIVORS OF GENDER BASED VIOLENCE

★ We provide specialized services to survivors of gender-based violence, to protect, empower, and aid their recovery.
★ We promote women’s rights and positive changes in attitudes and social norms including promoting girls’ education, reducing early marriage, and combating gender-based violence.
★ We assist survivors in getting emergency assistance to meet immediate needs.
★ We advocate for survivors’ rights and work to strengthen protections.

SEED INVESTS IN PEOPLE

★ Through livelihoods training and life skills education, we empower people with the tools they need to help themselves.
★ We build local capacity and the skills of our staff, creating future leaders and contributors to society.
★ We work to strengthen the skills of mental health and psychosocial support providers through education and training programs.
★ We seek to protect the rights of all those in Kurdistan.

SEED WORKS TO CHANGE ATTITUDES AND MAKE LONG TERM CHANGE

★ We work to overcome the stigma associated with mental illness and fear of mental health services through increasing public awareness and integrated programming.
★ We change gender norms and reduce gender-based violence through engaging with men, boys, women, and girls.
★ We promote tolerance and healthy ways to reduce conflict by bringing different religious and ethnic communities together.
WHO WE ARE

Helping Survivors of ISIS Recover
Sherri Kraham Talabany was one of the speakers during Kurdistan’s first TEDx Nishtiman event on April 1st. She spoke about how we can best support the recovery of survivors of violence and conflict in Kurdistan through comprehensive, long-term, mental health and psychosocial support services.

War, Refugees, and Health in Iraq
In April 2017, SEED partnered with the IRIS Center at the American University of Iraq Sulaimani, to host a conference, War, Refugees, and Health in Iraq, to discuss the challenges in providing health care to those affected by conflict.

Women Waging Peace
SEED Foundation’s Vice President, Tanya Gilly Khailany gave a TED talk on “Women Waging Peace” at TEDx Nishtiman Women on November 3rd, 2017, about the importance of women’s participation in the decision making during the peace building process.

- Charles D’Agata, CBSNews
There is a growing mental health crisis in Kurdistan and an urgent need to provide Mental Health and Psychosocial Support (MHPSS) Services to address the critical needs of the most vulnerable, including survivors of torture and sexual violence.

SEED provides holistic and comprehensive care to the most vulnerable people and communities in Kurdistan, responding to their individual needs based on a collaborative process with the client to assess and identify needs and develop care goals and treatment, including specialized services to survivors of gender-based violence, and those at risk. SEED’s services are designed to meet the needs of survivors of violence and conflict at every stage of the recovery process, from initial Critical Care our emergency response for those in crisis, including survivors recently returning from ISIS captivity, to longer-term case management and mental health services to help survivors rebuild their lives.

Recognizing the needs of most of our clients for longer-term care, SEED provides weekly mental health and case management services to individual clients until care goals and treatment plans are met. For 2017, most care was provided for an average of 4-5 months. These long-term services are generally unavailable in the KRI as the humanitarian response focuses on meeting emergency needs.

SEED’s Approach to Care

SEED Delivered Long-Term, High Quality, Comprehensive Mental Health and Psychosocial Support Services to Survivors of Violence and Conflict

- SEED delivers services to clients through mobile services, in offices, and at our SEED Center.
- SEED works in almost 30 camps and non-camp locations across the Kurdistan Region, serving those in need where they live.
- SEED works with local partners to expand our reach and to address our clients’ needs.
- SEED provided holistic, high quality MHPSS services to 1851 survivors of violence and others at risk.
CRITICAL CARE

SEED’s Critical Care service is the first step of our response, by those trained to respond to someone in crisis, and includes:

1. An emergency needs assessment.
2. Psychological First Aid and/or emotional support.
3. Provision of a Care Kit of basic goods such as clothing, shoes, bedding, hygiene items, and food, tailored to the needs of each client and her/his family.
4. Emergency assistance from SEED’s Survivor Fund where required to meet immediate medical or other emergency needs, or where possible application for emergency cash assistance to other organizations, where appropriate.
5. Immediate referrals to other service providers including medical and psychiatric consultations and treatment.
6. Referral for SEED’s long-term case management and psychological services.

IN 2017, SEED SUPPORTED 532 SURVIVORS IN CRISIS THROUGH CRITICAL CARE SERVICES

COMPREHENSIVE CASE MANAGEMENT

Working with clients in a collaborative process, SEED’s case managers assess needs and develop care plans to holistically meet clients’ needs across six domains of care. For the majority of clients, care is required for three to six months with contact between clients and their case managers taking place generally once per week. To assess progress, SEED uses tailored well-being tools for children and adults to measure improvements in clients’ well-being across all six domains of care.

IN 2017, SEED AIDED 447 MEN, WOMEN, AND CHILDREN THROUGH COMPREHENSIVE CASE MANAGEMENT SERVICES

SEED’S SIX DOMAINS OF CARE

ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT & LIVELIHOODS

HOUSING - INCLUDING POTENTIAL RELOCATION

BUILDING SUPPORT NETWORKS
MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

SEED’s qualified psychologists provide psychotherapy to reduce clients’ symptoms and levels of distress while helping them to improve coping and functioning. Psycho-education, which aims to improve understanding of mental health issues, is provided to all clients as a key component of SEED’s mental health services. Psychological services also include psychological first aid and facilitated emotional support groups. Most clients receiving mental health services are supported for four to six months with longer-term services provided as required by individual clients. Specific treatment goals are set and worked towards with individual clients, and SEED’s psychologists also administer the Harvard Trauma Questionnaire and the Hopkins Symptom Checklist.

PSYCHOSOCIAL SUPPORT ACTIVITIES

SEED’s psychosocial support (PSS) activities are designed to help people cope with challenging situations, increase their resilience, and improve their well-being, which may be used to complement our specialized services or operate independently. Bringing people together in a safe space enables them to build new protective social networks and allows SEED’s teams to identify individuals who could benefit from more specialized services, including case management and mental health services. All of our PSS programming focuses on social and emotional learning that will aid in participants’ well-being and success in life, which includes recognizing and managing emotions, setting and achieving goals, appreciating perspectives of others, establishing and maintaining positive relationships, making responsible decisions, and handling interpersonal situations constructively.

SEED offered a range of PSS activities in 2017 including:

★ Psycho-education and community awareness sessions on mental health.
★ Emotional Support Groups facilitated by our psychologists and which may also include some structured recreational activities.
★ Life Skills Classes on topics such as nutrition, hygiene, health, and gender based violence.
★ Structured recreational activities such as sports, sewing, and quilting.

PROTECTION SERVICES

In certain cases, clients are at risk of harm, including “honor-based” violence. In these cases, SEED works with the government and other actors, to find appropriate, protective shelter and protection and advocacy services on behalf of the client. This includes working with clients in the government shelters, or private locations, and assisting with potential relocation in Iraq or resettlement abroad.
SEED’S MHPSS SERVICE DELIVERY MODEL

1. REFERRAL
Referrals received by phone/email/in person by Case Management Team Lead. Case Management Team Lead assigns case manager, and the assigned case manager contacts the point of contact or client by phone to request consent for an initial visit.

2. CRITICAL CARE
A Critical Care visit from a case manager is always the first stage of case management for all clients served under all programs, and includes all of the following services:
1. Psychological First Aid (PFA) and/or emotional support
2. Communication of rights
3. Humanitarian care kit
4. Assess eligibility for Vital Voices emergency assistance, and if eligible start application process
5. If appropriate, assess emergency requirements for Survivor Fund
6. Conduct comprehensive needs assessment
7. Formation of Critical Care Plan

3. REFERRAL
Client consents to visit

4. SEED LONGER-TERM MHPSS SERVICES
1. Longer-term Case Management: All clients have a case manager who works collaboratively with clients to assess needs, and develop and implement care plans, including making referrals to other services, to holistically meet clients' needs across the domains of
   1. Health
   2. Mental health
   3. Housing, including potential relocation
   4. Economic empowerment, livelihoods and education
   5. Individual protection and legal services
   6. Support systems
2. Mental Health Services: Where mental health services are provided in accordance with care plan, psychologist conducts psychological assessment, collaboratively develops ongoing care plans, and provides individual or group psychotherapy.
3. Psychosocial Support (PSS) Activities: Psychologists, case managers, and/or community mobilizers provide PSS activities to help people cope with challenging situations, increase their resilience, and improve their well-being, including:
   • Psycho-education
   • Emotional support groups
   • Life skills classes
   • Structured recreational activities

5. MONITORING
Case managers/psychologists and their supervisors monitor services provided through implementation of the Care Plan. If client referred to other agency, through monthly follow-up with that agency and through case conferences with other providers.

6. CASE CLOSURE
If client completes goals or declines further services, complete case closure checklist, provide contact information to the client for future needs. If client is unreachable after 5 unique attempts over one month, close case.
The SEED Center in Mamilyan Camp in Akre served some of the most vulnerable populations in the KRI. Over 13,000 men, women, and children who fled ISIS in Sinjar and Mosul, sought shelter here.

MENTAL HEALTH AND PSYCHOSOCIAL SUPPORT SERVICES

SEED offered case management and mental health services to those in need. Case managers assessed needs and developed care plans to holistically meet clients’ needs across the domains of physical health; mental health; housing, including potential relocation; economic empowerment, livelihoods and education; individual protection and legal services; and support systems. Referrals were made to other service providers, such as healthcare providers, as required. SEED’s psychologists provide psychotherapy to reduce survivors’ symptom and reduce distress while helping them to achieve improved coping and functioning. Psycho-education, which aims to improve understanding of mental health issues, was provided to all clients as a key component of SEED’s mental health services.

LIVELIHOODS

SEED provided training to displaced men and women to equip them with skills that will enable them to provide for their families in a safe and dignified way both now and in the future.

Knitting Program

SEED’s Knitting Program equipped displaced women with the skills they need to build a sustainable income to safely generate an income and support their families. Having an income is not only empowering, but when women can meet some of their immediate needs, it provides a greater space for them to focus on healing and recovery. Knitting and crocheting are also highly therapeutic activities, which offered women an escape from isolation, the chance to build new friendships and support networks, and provided them with a productive activity to focus on, deepening the impact of the trauma services that SEED provides. Some women were so productive, we were able to sell their items and provide a modest income to the participants.

Woodworking Program
SEED’s woodwork program offered displaced men an opportunity to learn new skills and provide for their families, free from exploitation. Displacement is uniquely challenging for men – not only have they been displaced from their homes, but also from their traditional roles as ‘protectors’ and ‘providers’ for their families, which can take a serious toll on their mental health and well-being, and that of their families. SEED’s program brought men together to learn new skills and support each other.
STRUCTURED RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES

Structured recreational activities such as baking, music, art, sewing, and sports, offered women, men, boys, and girls an opportunity to meet new people and re-establish support networks. Most importantly, it also allowed our team of case managers and psychologists to build relationships with those in need and offer additional support, including case management and mental health services, in a culturally acceptable and non-stigmatizing way.

LIFE SKILLS

SEED offered a range of life skills education to men, women, boys and girls in the camp. Nutrition, hygiene and health classes raised awareness of positive practices which promote individual and family health and well-being.

Promoting well-being through Life Skills education

Women's Farming Program

SEED's Farming Program was designed to benefit women in a number of ways. Firstly, it provided a therapeutic outdoors activity and the chance to have social time with other women. Secondly, women were able to take home the vegetables they grew and help feed their families. Thirdly, the program gave us an opportunity to engage with them on healthy nutrition practices through nutrition classes.

SHIFTING NEEDS

During the year, many Mamiliyan Camp residents moved out of the camp, with some moving home to Sinjar, some moving to other camps and settlements in Kurdistan. In response, to ensure we continue to serve those where the need is greatest, we scaled back our service provision in Mamiliyan Camp in late 2017 and will serve it with mobile services early 2018.

MOBILE SERVICES

Reaching survivors where they are with comprehensive mental health and case management services

Our mobile trauma teams provided care for vulnerable men, women, boys, and girls, primarily in camps and urban areas in Dohuk and Erbil, and through our partner, Wchan, in Suleimaniya. Services were provided by mobile case managers, psychologists, and community mobilizers. SEED’s case managers refer clients to other service providers as required, with the majority of referrals being made to medical providers.

SEED provides holistic and comprehensive care to the most vulnerable people and communities in Kurdistan, responding to their individual needs based on a collaborative process with the client to assess and identify needs and develop care goals and treatment. SEED provides specialized services to survivors of gender-based violence, and those at risk. SEED’s services are designed to meet the needs of survivors of violence and conflict at every stage of the recovery process, from initial Critical Care or emergency response for those in crisis, including survivors recently returning from ISIS captivity, to longer-term case management and mental health services to help survivors rebuild their lives. IN 2017, MOBILE TEAMS PROVIDED COMPREHENSIVE CASE MANAGEMENT SERVICES TO 359 CLIENTS

IN 2017, MOBILE PSYCHOLOGISTS PROVIDED PSYCHOTHERAPY TO 97 CLIENTS
SEED’s psychosocial support (PSS) activities are designed to help individuals cope with challenging situations and increase their resilience. Bringing people together helps them build new protective social networks and allow SEED’s teams to identify individuals who could benefit from more specialized services, including case management and mental health services. SEED mobile teams offered a range of PSS activities: including psychoeducation to raise awareness on the effects of trauma and gender-based violence, to enable participants to better understand symptoms, reduce stigma, learn new coping strategies and promote access to services. We facilitated emotional support groups which included beading, sewing, and quilting.

In 2017, SEED’s mobile teams hosted 49 classes and group activities and reached 936 women, men, boys, and girls.

In 2017, mobile teams reached 800 men, women and teenagers through PSS activities to increase awareness, reduce stigma, and encourage access to MHPSS services.

In 2017, SEED’s mobile teams hosted 49 classes and group activities and reached 936 women, men, boys, and girls.

Care Kit: To support urgent needs, and to build trust, SEED’s mobile services teams provide survivors and their families with a Care Kit of basic goods such as clothing, shoes, bedding, hygiene items and occasionally food, as required. In 2017, SEED distributed 433 Care Kits of humanitarian supplies to survivors and their families.

Survivor Fund: SEED created a Survivor Fund to supported short-term, low amount, urgent, humanitarian, medical and protection needs as a critical and life-saving tool. It has included the purchase of life-saving drugs for chronic conditions; as well as psychotropic medications; and life-saving medical care treating wounds from explosions, diseases and wounds from sexual violence and torture. In 2017, SEED spent $34,000 through its Survivor Fund, making small disbursements for only the most urgent client needs.

Emergency Cash Assistance: SEED also supported survivors of severe forms of gender-based violence, primarily women and children who escaped ISIS captivity, who have much greater needs and who have no other access to support to apply for emergency cash assistance through other programming. In 2017, SEED assisted 90 clients to receive approximately $3,000 in emergency cash assistance.
The scale of the crisis in Iraq in recent years and the extreme violence perpetrated has overwhelmed local capacity to respond. There is a critical lack of qualified mental health professionals in to respond to the extreme violence perpetrated in recent years, grief and loss, displacement, and sexual violence, as well as the needs of other vulnerable people. As a result, most people are unable to access appropriate care.

In 2017, SEED established the Center for Mental Health and Psychosocial Support Services (MHPSS) at Koya University to serve as a space for shared learning and ongoing education to improve the quality of MHPSS services throughout the Kurdistan Region. Our goal is to strengthen the skills and knowledge of service providers through education, training, and supervision. The Center is supported by two governing boards: the Advisory Board, comprised of government and non-government leaders providing policy leadership and ensuring sustainability, and the Technical Board, comprised of local and international experts including practitioners, academics, and activists experienced in the delivery of MHPSS services to conflict-affected communities and survivors of trauma.

Education - Strengthening Clinical Psychology Education

SEED and Koya University have partnered together to strengthen the undergraduate Clinical Psychology Program to provide students with the knowledge and skills necessary to address the mental health needs of civilians affected by the current crisis in Iraq. We strengthen the current curriculum, integrating a new trauma specialty, building practical and clinical skills, and providing clinical experience with supervision through a new supervised practicum.

This fall, two new courses were launched including a one-year trauma specialization with new content on trauma, torture, sexual violence, gender-based violence, grief and loss, and psychosocial support. The capacity of the university faculty was strengthened through training in trauma psychology, clinical supervision, interactive learning techniques and psychological first aid.

Training and Supervision - Strengthening skills of service providers

In 2017, the Center hosted key training workshops for service providers on trauma, traumatic grief and loss, stress management, and psychological first aid, and created and launched its signature program - The Psychosocial Support Services (PSS) Training Program.

The PSS Training Program is an intensive 6-month training program to improve skills of helping professionals providing services to the most vulnerable. During this training program students reviewed critical elements of MHPSS services and learned to integrate new knowledge and skills into practice. Through interactive and experiential learning approaches, integrating lecture with discussion, role-playing, case studies, case presentations, videos, and group and independent projects, participants were empowered to support their clients in the healing process.

- Delivery of the PSS Training Program began in the spring, as an intensive training for service providers serving survivors of conflict and violence, which combines four weeks of instruction with ongoing supervision over the course of five to six months.
- Twenty-four providers graduated in November 2017 and 54 additional students were enrolled for early 2018.

I can say that the most important thing I’ve learned during the PSS Training Program is ethics in helping those in need, regardless of their gender, religion or ethnicity.

On October 2nd, SEED hosted its Annual Gala Event ‘Children in Crisis’ in Washington, D.C. During this gala, for the first time, we introduced The Solav Award. This award recognizes extraordinary contributions by outstanding individuals and organizations that support survivors of violence and conflict in Iraq, and to honor the survivors, in whose name they serve.

Solav was a six-year old girl from Sinjar, who was held by ISIS. Along with thousands of other Yezidis, Solav and her family came under attack in August 2014 when ISIS targeted religious minorities, murdering thousands of men and teenage boys, and enslaving thousands of women and children. She and her brother were kidnapped with their mother, and later separated from her. In 2016, a relative of Solav’s escaped ISIS and gave Solav’s father details of where she was being held. It took months, and because of their father’s persistence and the bravery of local heroes, Solav and her brother were found and rescued in early 2017. Thankfully, her mother was rescued a few months later and reunited with her family. Life remains extremely hard but Solav and her family are beginning to feel safe again and she and her brother are enrolled in school. Solav and her family, represent the brave women, men, and children affected by the crisis which we must all strive to support. It is in her name that SEED has created this annual award. The purpose of the Solav Award is to recognize individuals or organizations whose outstanding efforts have made a real difference in rebuilding the lives of this war’s survivors.

Mercury One

Founded by TV personality Glenn Beck, Mercury One quietly, boldly, and effectively works to save lives in Kurdistan. It supports efforts to rescue women and children in ISIS captivity; to help their recovery through supporting psychological and social services to help those suffering trauma to heal and live again and to learn skills so they can earn an income; to resettle vulnerable, affected minorities in housing in Kurdistan and abroad; and to rebuild homes, communities, and religious sites in Iraq.

Vital Voices

Through its Voices Against Violence global initiative, Vital Voices provides life-saving assistance to survivors of extreme forms of gender-based violence and harmful traditional practices. To respond to thousands of women and girls in Iraq who had desperate and life-threatening medical, psychological and emergency needs as a result of torture, sexual slavery, and sexual violence while in ISIS captivity, Vital Voices created this emergency fund to support survivors in their gravest hour, giving them hope that they can live again.
KURDISTAN… A STORY OF SURVIVAL

A coffee table art book

Kurdistan survived the brutal dictator, Saddam Hussein, and decades of war, conflict, and targeted persecution. More recently, the terrorist group, the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS), waged a genocidal campaign against Yezidis and other religious minorities in the region. The vision of the book was to share beautiful images of Kurdistan and tell the many stories of survival from yesterday and today. SEED is grateful to the amazing artists and photographers, who donated their work, and are helping to tell the story of Kurdistan, while supporting SEED's work.

Books can be purchased on www.amazon.com or www.smile.amazon.com*
*If you select SEED for Change as your designated charity, a portion of your purchases on Amazon will be donated to SEED.
OUR PROGRAMS AND PARTNERS

Programs

DRL - STARS Program
SEED is implementing a multi-year grant, Strengthening Assistance for Returnees and Survivors of Gender-Based Violence (STARS) Program with funding from the U.S. Department of State, Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor (DRL). The goal of the STARS Program is to increase the availability of, and access to, quality mental health and psychosocial support (MHPSS) services for the most vulnerable women and girls, particularly survivors of gender-based violence (GBV), including those who have escaped ISIS captivity. SEED is simultaneously increasing local capacity to provide MHPSS services through the provision of education, training, and supervision for current service providers and clinical psychology students, while expanding access to high quality MHPSS services through the provision of mobile MHPSS services to women and girls in need across Kurdistan Region.

Mercury One - CARE and CARE II Programs
Mercury One has enabled SEED to expand access to high quality MHPSS services through mobile trauma teams, thereby improving the well-being and protection of survivors of violence, provide income-generation opportunities for displaced women and men who are survivors of violence, and increase the capacity of local service providers to provide high quality care.

Amanat Trust
With funding from the Amanat Trust, SEED has been able to strengthen its clinical services, incorporating new approaches to care, and provide case management and mental health services to survivors of violence. In early 2018, this funding will enable SEED to further strengthen its capacity to measure impact.

Partners

Koya University
SEED and Koya University have collaborated to launch the Center for Mental Health and Psychosocial Support Services (MHPSS) at Koya University, the only university in Iraq to offer an undergraduate clinical psychology program. The Center for MHPSS serves as a space for shared learning and ongoing education to improve the quality of MHPSS services throughout the Kurdistan Region.

Wchan Organization for Victims of Human Rights Violations
SEED partners with Wchan Organization for Victims of Human Rights Violations, a locally registered NGO dedicated to ending human rights violations and reducing the suffering of victims of such violations, to provide case management and mental health services for survivors in Suleimaniya.

Vital Voices
SEED affiliates with Vital Voices to provide assistance to individuals who are survivors of severe forms of gender-based violence and who have no other access to support.

KRG’s Anti-Trafficking Committee
SEED is an NGO member of the KRG’s Anti-Trafficking Committee, an inter-ministerial body within the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) which aims to combat human trafficking in the Kurdistan Region.
OUR SUPPORTERS

SEED Foundation is extremely grateful to all its supporters. It has been a challenging 2017 for those of us in the Kurdistan Region and Iraq. Despite these challenges, SEED has thrived and grown tremendously, working to meet the needs of survivors of violence and conflict and those most at risk. We could have not accomplished this without your support which helped us reach so many with high-quality services. We want to show our deepest gratitude to all donors. (Note: this report reflects donor contributions above $1,000 between January 1st and December 31, 2017.)
